TESTIMONIAL

Just like the River Ganga, which passes through various stages — from its origin at Gangotri as a small stream, through its vigorous mountain course, and finally reaching a calm and placid stage the Civil Service Institute, Pala, too has undergone a similar journey.

Today, it stands in its mature and steady phase, and I have been a part of all these stages. I am proud to say that I have witnessed all these stages of development of this Institute. Now, this institute has so far contributed hundreds of civil servants to the nation.

Just as Jesus once responded to the question, “Can anything good come from Nazareth?”, this institute too has given its own resounding answer to those who once wondered if anything remarkable could come from Pala — through these dedicated civil servants.

It is indeed significant that so many who play crucial roles in India's administrative system are proud alumni of this institute.

The Civil Service Institute, Pala, distinguishes itself by moving beyond conventional coaching to offer a truly wholesome and comprehensive training program that shapes not just successful aspirants, but future nation-builders. The Institute strives to instil a commitment to public service and constitutional values, ensuring that the trainees are prepared to be upright and conscientious leaders.

In my years of service, I have had the privilege of leading many successful officers who were trained at the Civil Services Training Institute, Pala. I have consistently found in them a hallmark of excellence and a set of qualities—integrity, dedication, and intellectual rigour—that truly sets them apart.

Its coaching philosophy is designed to build more than just successful candidates but to shape future leaders. The Institute focuses on cultivating a deep, interdisciplinary understanding of subjects, encouraging aspirants to connect the dots between policy, history, economics, and society

I needed something to boost my confidence. This institute really helped me because, with Sunil Sir, it wasn't just a brief session like most prominent institutions offer. Instead, sessions lasted 3-4 hours, which allowed for a thorough approach. That really helped me focus on every detail and boosted my confidence.
